“As close to being a rock band as a chamber orchestra can be” (The New York Times), Alarm Will Sound is a 20-member touring ensemble led by Artistic Director Alan Pierson that commissions, performs, and records innovative works by established and emerging composers, especially works that incorporate theatrical and multimedia elements by choreographers, visual artists, designers, and directors. Its wide-ranging artistic vision looks beyond genre—electronic vs. acoustic, high-modernist vs. pop-influenced, conventional classical concert vs. multimedia experience.

“One of the most vital and original ensembles on the American music scene.” —The New York Times

Music and Ideas

Alarm Will Sound is happy to collaborate with your organization’s artistic team to create programs that suit your stylistic focus or mission. Click here to see our full repertoire list.

The Hunger

Donnacha Dennehy’s The Hunger is a music-theater work that gives a unique perspective on Ireland’s Great Famine. Directed by leading young Irish director Tom Creed, it features the remarkable folk singer Iarla Ó Lionáird and AWS musicians directly integrated into the staging. The Irish folk music narrative is interwoven with personal, historical accounts, along with interviews of contemporary thinkers, including Paul Krugman and Noam Chomsky.

1969 (Multimedia)

More than 40 years ago, the Beatles and Karlheinz Stockhausen arranged to meet in New York City to plan a joint concert (which never actually took place). Told through their own words, music, and images, "1969" tells the story of great musicians—John Lennon, Karlheinz Stockhausen, Paul McCartney, Luciano Berio, Yoko Ono, and Leonard Bernstein—striving for a new world and musical ideal amidst the turmoil of the ‘60s.

This Music Shouldn’t Exist (Multimedia)

This program is a multimedia theatrical work based on the remarkable life and music of influential post-war composer György Ligeti. This unconventional theater piece deals with Ligeti’s traumatic early experiences of escape and alienation, and the ways in which those experiences came to shape his musical output.

Mind Out of Matter

Scott Johnson’s Mind Out of Matter examines religion from an atheist point of view. Instead of choirs singing biblical texts, Mind Out of Matter uses the recorded voice of Daniel C. Dennett. Johnson combines musical styles as disparate as Baroque recitative and retro-funk in order to illuminate Dennett’s central claim: just as plants and animals evolve in the physical environment, so do ideas and traditions compete within ecosystems made up of human minds and cultures.
Acoustica

Music by electronica artist Aphex Twin, arranged by ensemble members, is performed alongside pieces that are influenced by electronic music. The music (featured on AWS’s Acoustica album) is imaginative and quirky, fun to perform, and virtuosic. The challenges of capturing the nearly limitless possibilities available on a computer present a fascinating creative tension in today’s world between humans and machines.

Ten Thousand Birds

John Luther Adams’s Ten Thousand Birds is an open-ended collection of pieces based on birdsong that encompasses a full range of colors and instrumentation, from solos to full orchestra. Each piece is a self-contained world with its own sense of space and time, and can be performed for an indefinite duration. The pieces can be combined simultaneously and sequentially in varied ways. The flexibility of the score lends itself to site-specific adaptation in outdoor and indoor spaces.

Twinned

Twinned centers on three pioneers of electronic music: Edgard Varèse, Raymond Scott, and Aphex Twin. In Twinned, Alarm Will Sound and Dance Heginbotham have come together to create a music and movement event, one in which both ensembles are involved in all aspects of the performance, the goal being to create an interwoven musical and dramatic experience.

Splitting Adams

Alarm Will Sound has teamed up with New York Public Radio’s Peabody Award-winning podcast Meet the Composer to create a new kind of concert experience. Splitting Adams fuses the powerful music of John Adams with the power of podcasts to dig deep and get personal. It does not separate stories about the music from the music itself.
Additional Offerings

Composer Readings
Alarm Will Sound offers composer readings of works for sinfonietta. Composers are expected to write a work for Alarm Will Sound’s complete instrumentation that lasts up to 8 minutes in duration. Due to rehearsal/technical demands, we will not be able to program works that include electronics. During a 3-hour workshop, we are able to read up to four eight-minute pieces.

Educational Programs
As a leader in the field of new music performance, Alarm Will Sound has extended its artistic reach to the field of education by offering creative programs for a range of students in school and pre-professional settings.

An important corollary to our programs for young students is our work with teachers through professional-development workshops that we lead in order to give them the tools and skills needed to incorporate contemporary music into their pedagogy.

Capitalizing on our significant entrepreneurial experience, Alarm Will Sound also offers arts-entrepreneurship seminars in which participants develop ideas for performing-arts projects and create a business plan through workshops led by AWS Managing Director Gavin Chuck and AWS Artistic Director Alan Pierson.
Press

Steve Smith, The New York Times
“...unusually versatile, reliably exhilarating new-music ensemble ... Mr. Pierson and his musicians played with an exactness and verve that might inspire any composer to dream big.”

Alex Ross, The Rest Is Noise
“What I saw of Alarm Will Sound confirms that this ensemble not only possesses extreme virtuosity (that we knew) but that it has developed powerful ideas about how to renovate the concert experience.”

Anthony Tommasini, The New York Times
“...the future of classical music...”

Allan Kozinn, The New York Times
“Alarm Will Sound has become one of the most vital and original ensembles on the American music scene.”

Kyle MacMillan, The Denver Post
“Alarm Will Sound has grabbed the future of classical music and made it now—merging styles, erasing boundaries, championing experimentation and obviously having fun along the way...if classical music is to remain a vital, relevant form that can attract new, young audiences, it needs daring, exciting groups like Alarm Will Sound.”

Allan Kozinn, The New York Times
“...as close to being a rock band as a chamber orchestra can be.”

Allan Ulrich, Financial Times
“...insouciant virtuosity...a force to reckon with in contemporary American music.”

Entertainment Weekly
“...überhip...”

Boston’s Weekly Dig
“...wild precision and brass balls...”
